Draft materials for discussion

Document 1: Best practice policies for avoiding leakage provides a review of ‘best practice’ policies for avoiding leakage and economic harm to businesses in carbon pricing programs. The document discusses the primary policies that have been used to address leakage under carbon pricing programs, e.g., the allocation of free or ‘no cost’ allowances to EITE industries, and compares Washington’s approach with other jurisdictions.

Document 2: Methods for developing greenhouse gas benchmarks provides a review of methods for developing greenhouse benchmarks for EITE facilities within carbon pricing programs. The document discusses key design considerations for establishing benchmarks for EITEs and the methods used in other jurisdictions, such as product-based benchmarking, including the potential role of best available technology assessments.
