Mason County Well Location Accuracy Study Completed by Andrea Lauden on July 15, 2019

Introduction

The purpose of this study is to quantify the accuracy of Public Land Survey System (PLS; reported as township, range, section, ½ and ½-½) locations, within Mason County, as reported on well reports in Department of Ecology's (Ecology) Well Report Database. Property owners, well drillers, and environmental planners frequently use Ecology's Well Report Viewer, which typically displays well locations at the ¼-¼ centroid of their PLS location. This study stems from discussions between Ecology, the Squaxin Island Tribe, and Mason County regarding the importance of well report location accuracy for these users. This study began in March of 2019, and is based on the data available at that time. It is a continuation of a state-wide well report PLS location accuracy study completed in November of 2018 by Andrea Lauden.

Summary

Ecology examined well report locations in Mason County to derive well location accuracy statistics. The accuracy of PLS locations on a random sample of 187 water well reports from Mason County was analyzed, and this data was then broken down by decade, WRIA, and drilling company. Only 79% of the locations could be verified. Of those, 70% were reported correctly and 30% were reported incorrectly. The majority of errors are in the reported ½ and/or ¼-¼, not the township, range or section. PLS location errors peaked in the 1990s, when the highest number of reports were received, and have declined since then. Miskeyed errors have increased over the past few decades but the miskeyed error rate is lower than that of reported errors. The majority of well reports were located within WRIA 14, which had the highest reporting error rate. The drilling company with the highest reported location error rate was Arcadia Drilling Inc. A likely cause of PLS location errors is confusion with the PLS system, especially in recent decades as other location information such as parcel number, street address, and possibly latitude/longitude are more widely used by well drillers.

Method

Ecology's database contains 8,910 water well reports in Mason County, excluding dewatering well reports. Two hundred well reports were randomly selected for this study using the RAND function in Microsoft Excel, then group water systems and one well report with an incorrectly reported county were excluded, for a total of 187 reports (2.1% of the all the water well reports in Mason County, excluding dewatering wells).

The PLS locations reported on each of the 187 well reports were analyzed for accuracy by comparing the PLS location to other location information on the well report, including but not limited to: parcel number, well street address, property owner address, property owner name, and project name. This information was verified using Ecology's Well Report Database and Mason

County Assessor's public property records, which include previous property owners but no well information. The well reports were categorized as follows:

Cannot Verify: the PLS location could not be verified using the County Assessor's public property records and NOI and well report location information.

Reported Correctly: the reported PLS location was verified as correct.

Reported Correctly but Missing ¹/₄ or ¹/₄-¹/₄: the township, range and section were reported correctly, the ¹/₄-¹/₄ or ¹/₄ were not reported at all, and the reported PLS location was verified as correct. If the ¹/₄ and ¹/₄-¹/₄ could be verified, they were added to the database record (highlighted light green in Appendix A).

Miskeyed: the PLS location in the database record (as transcribed from the well report by Ecology) does not match the PLS location written on the well report, and the PLS location on the well report was verified and found to be correct. The database record was then corrected (as highlighted orange in Appendix A).

Reported Incorrectly: the verified PLS location was a different PLS location than was reported on the well report. The correct PLS location was noted for later correction in the database (highlighted yellow in Appendix A). The scale of the location errors, i.e. the distances of the reported PLS locations from the correct PLS locations, were then further analyzed:

TRS Reported Incorrectly: the PLS location error was in the reporting of the township, range, or section.

Parcel data on the well reports were analyzed to better understand the rate of reporting this data, and the accuracy of the reported parcels. The reports were categorized as follows:

Reported Correctly: Parcel included on the well report was verified as correct with the County Assessor's public property records.

Reported Incorrectly: Parcel included on the well report was verified as incorrect with the County Assessor's public property records (as highlighted yellow in Appendix A).

Miskeyed: Parcel in the database record (as transcribed from the well report by Ecology) does not match the parcel written on the well report, and the parcel on the well report was verified as correct. The database record was then corrected (as highlighted orange in Appendix A).

Unreported; Found in County Records: Parcel not included on well report, but verified with the County Assessor's public property records (as highlighted light green in Appendix A).

Parcel Not Verified: Parcel not included on well report, and could not be located. Some of these parcels could not be verified even though the PLS location was verified, because several possible parcel matches were located within the verified PLS location, so one parcel could not be definitively identified.

Other information on the well report used for analysis in this study was not always available in the database record and was found by viewing the well report itself. A total of 24 well reports in this study were initially missing a date of well construction in their database record, of which all but 2 ('Completed Date' field highlighted light green in Appendix A) could be added from the date reported on the well report. The drilling company that submits a well report is not a field in the well report database and therefore required manually populating in this study by adding this information from the well report.

Findings and Analysis

The result of the accuracy analysis of all well reports is represented in Figure 1, and the result of the accuracy analysis of verified well locations (excluding the Cannot Verify category) is represented in Figure 2. Overall, 40 reported PLS locations could not be verified ('Cannot Verify'), of which all 40 had no reported parcel number and 33 had no reported street name or address to use for PLS location verification.

The Reported Correctly, Reported Correctly but Missing ¼ and ¼-¼, and Miskeyed categories are shades of blue to group the well reports that were verified as correct. The ¼-¼ Reported Incorrectly and TRS Reported Incorrectly categories are shades of green to group the well reports that were verified as incorrect.

Accuracy by Decade

Several trends in location reporting are visible when looking at all the well reports by category over the decade in which the well was constructed (Table 2 and Figure 3). Rates of reported location errors (Reported Incorrectly) and unverifiable reported locations (Cannot Verify) have decreased over time, and the rate of miskeyed locations has generally increased over time. The decade with the highest rate of miskeyed errors (14%) is the 2010s, which is significantly higher than the rate of miskeyed locations for all well reports (4%).

Of all the 8,910 water well reports in Ecology's Well Report Database constructed in Mason County, 29% were drilled in the 1990s. However, 14% of total reports do not include a date of construction in their database record. Likewise, 29% of the reports in this study were also constructed in the 1990s, and 13% of well reports in this study do not include a date of construction in their database record. The majority of these dates were reported on the actual well report, but not keyed into the database record.

Several changes in well location reporting occurred in this decade due to the filing of Washington Administration Code (WAC) 173-160-141, "What are the requirements regarding water well reports?" in 1998. This WAC required additional information to be included on water well reports, including parcel number. Well reports from earlier decades appear to be have more accurate PLS locations but less supporting location information such as a parcel number with which to verify the location due to there being no reporting requirement of this supporting location information. The 0% PLS location error rate in the 1950s and 1960s are likely due to several factors. Due to the limited sample size from those decades, further analysis could be beneficial.

Parcel Data Analysis

72% of well reports had no parcel number reported, but 40% could be found using the County Assessor's public property records (Table 3 and Figure 4).

Table 3	Number of Well Reports	% of Total Well Reports
Reported Correctly	47	25%
Miskeyed	5	3%
Reported Incorrectly	1	<1%

The results of this parcel data study are further studied in Figure 5 by the decade in which they were received. As mentioned previously, the regulation requiring drillers to include parcel numbers on water well reports, WAC 173-160-141, was adopted in 1998. According to this

Mason County study, this regulation was not consistently enforced for many years, though every well report within the last decade except one was reported correctly. A total of 48% of the parcels of wells constructed in or before 1998 (58 well reports), including all wells drilled before 1974 (12 well reports), could not be verified due to the lack of other location information reported, or due to the changes in property ownership since the date of construction.

WRIA Data Analysis

Mason County includes parts of WRIAs 14, 15, 16, and 22. Table 4 and Figure 7 display the results of this study by WRIA. Only five of the well reports were not assigned to a WRIA in their database record, and three of those could be verified and added. Two well reports that could not be verified did not include a WRIA ('Unknown' field). Shelton, the largest city in Mason County, is in WRIA 14. The majority of water well reports in this study are located in WRIA 14 due to the large population in and around Shelton. WRIA 14 also has the highest rate of location errors. WRIA 16 has both the lowest rate of location errors and the highest rate of well reports that could not be located. The sample size for WRIAs 16 and 22 are small, so these results could benefit from further analysis.

Drilling Company Data Analysis

Arcadia Drilling Inc. submitted 14% of well reports in this study, and likely a much higher percent of all water well reports in Mason County, because there are 1,782 well reports (20% of the 8910 total) that were submitted by Arcadia in Ecology's NOI database, which does not include well reports submitted before NOIs were required by RCW 18.104.048 in 1987. The earliest well reports in the NOI database from Arcadia were submitted in 1993, however, and several well reports in the study from Arcadia were submitted in the 1970s, indicating that Arcadia likely submitted more than 20% of water well reports in Mason County.

Bedell Pump and Drilling Co. and Tyee Well Drilling Co. Inc., companies that operated pre-1990, have the highest rate of well reports that could not be verified. However, this reflects the accuracy rates of all well reports in the pre-1990 decades, and can therefore likely be attributed to common issues and not a unique problem within the companies.

Conclusion

Only 79% of the well report PLS locations could be verified. Of those, 70% were reported correctly and 30% were reported incorrectly. Because many locations could not be verified, it is not possible to quantify the actual error rate of all water well reports in Mason County based on this study. Depending on the number of the 'Cannot Verify' reports that are located correctly, the error rate could be as low as 26%, if the 'Cannot Verify' reports are all located correctly, and as high as 47% (26%+21%), if they are all located incorrectly.

Because all the PLS locations of well reports from the 2010s could be verified, this decade has an actual error rate of 27%. This increase in ability to verify locations is largely due to (the enforcement of) the requirement to include parcel data and street address on well reports.

PLS location errors are higher in the 1990s-2010s than in previous decades. This could be explained by the decline in well drillers' reliance on PLS locations in their work. Instead, drillers increasingly depend on parcel or street address location data, and more recently, latitude and longitude. However, the number of well reports that could not be verified decreased as the number of errors increased, and these trends could be related. If a greater number of locations that could not be verified are also incorrect, then the error rate in earlier decades could be much higher. It is not possible to explain this difference in error rate over time without further analysis.

Potential Follow-Up Actions

Recommended further studies, for a deeper analysis of location reporting accuracy, include:

- Reduce the 'Cannot Verify' rate by verifying locations with additional resources, such as field checking or accessing the County Assessor's older records (not publicly available), for a more conclusive error rate.
- Study the relationship between PLS locations and reported latitude and longitude on well reports.
- Analyze the location accuracy of electronically submitted well reports through Ecology's Well Report Gateway, which are uploaded directly to the Well Report Database.

Steps that Ecology could take to improve location accuracy on well reports include:

- Require latitude and longitude on well reports in order to provide verifiable location information that does not change in the way that addresses, parcels, and property owners do, and is likely now more familiar to drillers than PLS location.
- Provide an interactive mapping tool on the online NOI form for drillers to locate their drilling site, to auto-populate a PLS location and add latitude and longitude coordinates from this mapped location. This tool could also be used for well reporting.
- Target technical assistance and compliance efforts towards drilling companies with higher error rates, where possible.
- Create a process for Ecology staff processing well reports to clearly document drilling companies' location reporting errors for identify opportunities for further training on location reporting.
